Hopkinsville Armory Plans Approved

Arrival Dates Set For Kentuckians; State Status Again By 12 August

Kentuckians called to active duty during the Berlin Crisis will return to the Blue Grass State August 9 and are slated to return to State control by August 12.

Of the eleven units mobilized, the Second Medium Tank Battalion and the 413th Ordinance Company will leave Fort Stewart, Ga. on August 7. The Third Medium Tank Battalion will depart Fort Knox August 9.

All personnel will be released August 12 with the following exceptions:

1—Personnel attending service schools who volunteer to complete classes will remain on duty.

2—Those personnel who volunteered to remain for a full year.

3—Those who have enlisted in the regular Army.

4—Those who are now in Army hospitals.

Guard Tankers To Share Facilities With Reserve

Construction of a new National Guard Armory in Hopkinsville is closer to a reality with approval of preliminary plans and drawings received from the Engineering Staff of the Department of Finance here, and the National Guard Bureau in Washington.

Major General Arthur Y. Lloyd, The Adjutant General of Kentucky has notified Lawrence Casner, of Madisonville, Architect for the $235,000 project, to begin final plans and specifications.

The Hopkinsville Armory is the third of five new National Guard Armories to receive approval for final plans. New Armories for Marion and Campbellsville were approved on April 20.

The two remaining Armories, which are presently on the drawing board, are scheduled for Glasgow and Monticello.

The Hopkinsville Armory is the largest proposed for construction this year. It will be the first Armory in Kentucky which will provide facilities for joint use of both National Guard and U. S. Army Reserve units. Originally, both the National Guard and Reserve were planned separate armories but, for economy reasons, the original National Guard Building was expanded from 15,007 square feet of floor space to 18,672 square feet of space in order to provide office space for the Reserve organizations.

Two National Guard units, which are presently on active duty at Fort Knox, (Ky.) will occupy the new building. These will be the Scout Platoon of Headquarters Company and Company B, of the Third Medium Tank Battalion, 123d Armor.

These units were called on active duty during October 1961 at the height of the Berlin Crisis.

INFANTRY VETERANS HOLD REUNION

The 14th Annual Reunion of the 149th Infantry Veterans Association has been scheduled for the St. Matthews Armory July 21.

The day-long affair is to begin with a display of equipment of the 149th Armor Group. A buffet dinner will be served during the evening and will be followed by a short business session and the election of officers.

A dance party is scheduled to climax the affair.

By Major General A. Y. Lloyd

Having just returned from visits to the Kentucky National Guard units at both Fort Stewart and Fort Knox, it seems hardly possible that nearly a year has passed since I watched these units arrive in their respective posts to begin their active federal service. They will soon be back so we will begin this column with a unanimous:

"WELCOME HOME AND CONGRATULATIONS FOR A JOB WELL DONE!"

It is with pride and deep appreciation that I extend a hearty and warm "Welcome Home" to returning members of the Kentucky Army National Guard. Your performance during this national emergency has been most gratifying, not only to the Military Department but to all Kentucky Guardsmen.

The hardships and sacrifices imposed on you and your families were accepted and overcome in a manner in which all Kentuckians are extremely proud.

We all realize, I'm sure, the importance and necessity of the mobilization effort. The Berlin Crisis, and the world situation in general, forced us to prepare ourselves for an emergency. This emergency was of a nature and magnitude never before experienced by the free world. Never in history have so many men, both Active and Reserve, combined efforts to effectively prevent, rather than engage in, armed conflict.

The accomplishments of the 2nd & 3rd Medium Tank Battalions and the 413th Ordnance Company should be an incentive to all units of this command. These standards of perfection should be strived for by every individual of the Kentucky National Guard. We owe these returning Guardsmen a debt of gratitude. If these fellow members of the Guard can contribute so much, it is the responsibility of all the rest of us to do our fair share. They contributed almost a year—can we not contribute at least our time by displaying perfect drill attendance records at ANAC-DUTRA 62 and during FY 63 Home Station Training?

Now is the time to re-evaluate our training programs and training goals to

OFF DRAWING BOARD—This is Architect Lawrence Castner's drawing of the National Guard and Army Reserve Armory Center scheduled to be built for Hopkinsville. Army Band Program Lauded By Ashland Area Citizens

Ashland, Ky.—A concert here recently by the 202nd Army Band pointed up the benefits that a unit can derive from an outstanding public information program.

Over 1,200 persons from the Ashland area attended the concert—drawn by a superior publicity program in which members of the band, the Ashland Independent and local business co-operated.

The concert came after feature length, newspaper staff-written pieces had appeared in the paper and local businessmen had displayed prominently posters calling attention to the concert.

Quite fittingly, an NCO who has done much in the area to bring about good will between the community and the Guard was honored at the program.

SSGT Victor Rodman, honored for his publicity work for the 201st Engineer Battalion, was made an honorary recruiter, a Kentucky Colonel and received two commendations.

He was given the honors primarily for his work on the military affairs page of the Sunday Independent, in which he writes a number of articles that help to explain the Guard and the Army to the community.

Besides doing publicity for his own unit, Rodman has helped with publicity for the band and other units and has traveled with the band to a number of Kentucky cities.

The band is well known throughout Kentucky for its superior music. Its concerts usually draw a packed house.

The group is directed by CWO William F. Clark, who holds an A.B. in music and an M.A. in music education.

He attempts to have the band play pieces that usually are performed only by a symphony orchestra. And those who have heard the ensemble say the group does a good job.

Clark explained that the woodwind section of the band usually plays the parts that the string instruments would play in a symphony orchestra.

In addition, this year the band has an added attraction. Besides offering good music, it also offers good singing. At the recent concert, the 202nd Army Band Choir gave its debut performance.

The result was the same raves that have greeted the band performances.

Once again, let me express my appreciation to all members of the 2nd and 3rd Med Tk Bn, 123d Armor and the 413th Ordnance Co. for a job well done. I extend to you, from all members of the Kentucky National Guard, a warm and well deserved Congratulations and "Welcome Home."

General G. Lee McClain Armory Dedicated in Bardstown

Saturday June 23d will be remembered as the "Lee McClain Day" in Bardstown for this was the day that the new National Guard Armory was dedicated in the name of former State Adjutant General, Brigadier General G. Lee McClain.

Governor Bert T. Combs and Major General Arthur Y. Lloyd and Bardstown Mayor W. G. A. Sympson were on hand for the dedication ceremonies which were held in the new building beginning at 2:30 P.M.

During his speech, Governor Combs complimented the Bardstown National Guard unit as "one of the best in the State" and paid tribute to Lee McClain as a "real Kentuckian." He called the new building a symbol of progress in Kentucky.

General Lloyd pointed out that five armories have been completed during Governor Combs' administration and "plans are going forward on five more."

Continuing, General Lloyd said "I know of no man in the State who has done more to promote the National Guard than Lee McClain."

General McClain expressed his appreciation for the honor bestowed upon him and told the crowd, "I still have the same idea about the National Guard that I had 26 years ago. 'The citizen-soldier is of great importance in time of peace and war.' 'All the wars in which America has fought have been won by citizen-soldiers,' he said.

Lt. Col. Sam K. Cecil, member of the State Headquarters Staff, served as master of ceremonies for the program. Cecil was a member of the Bardstown Guard unit when General McClain was Adjutant General, (1936-40).

The new armory, which replaces an armory shared with the American Legion in Bardstown, is a $92,000 modification of a Guard storage facility. Battery C, 2d Howitzer Battalion, 138th Artillery commanded by 1st Lt. Harold O. Loy is now occupying the building.

The Guard's 202d Army Band, of Ashland, and members of Battery C, formed an honor guard for the arrival of Governor Combs by helicopter. After the dedication ceremonies, the band participated in a parade in Bardstown which heralded the opening of the fourth season of the "Stephen Foster Story," an outdoor drama held at Bardstown's Old Kentucky Home State Park.

Passing In Review

Project Pays Dividend—Pictures of the Middlesboro National Guard Armory recently were prominently displayed in The Middlesboro Daily News.

Under a headline, "A Little Grass, a Few Shrubs at the Guard Armory—and Presto," the paper showed pictures of the Armory before and after a beautification project.

The first picture showed the Armory shortly after it had been constructed—a good-looking building on some shabby-looking ground. The next picture showed the armory after the Middlesboro Garden Club had conducted a beautification project.

The club planted holly trees, yews, dogwood and shrubbery at the Armory.

Watch Drill Attendance — Kentucky National Guardsmen who enlisted after November 1961 have been warned that they are liable for a stint on active duty if their drill attendance is unsatisfactory.

A recent amendment to Public Law 87-378 permits the call-up of any individual for a period of 45 days if his drill attendance has not been up to par.

Kentucky Windage? — Representatives of the 2d Medium Tank Battalion of Kentucky's Army National Guard qualified with high scores recently at the opening of a new trainfire range at Fort Stewart, Ga. The new trainfire ranges are replacing the old Known Distance ranges and officials feel they are providing a more realistic firing situation.

The tankers have been an active duty at the Georgia Post since October.
