ORLANDO, Fla.—The Kentucky Air National Guard's 123rd Airlift Wing has been named the top airlift or tanker unit in the Air National Guard by the Airlift/Tanker Association, a group of aviation professionals dedicated to the support of military airlift.

Lt. Gen. Stanley Clarke III, director of the Air National Guard, presented the 2015 Major General Stanley F.H. Newman Award to Kentucky's adjutant general, Maj. Gen. Edward Tonini, during the A/TA's annual convention here Oct. 30.

"Once again, the Airmen of the Kentucky Air National Guard have demonstrated that the 123rd Airlift Wing is truly a world-class organization," Tonini said. "From providing combat airlift in support of wartime taskings in Southwest Asia to helping stop the spread of Ebola in West Africa, the 123rd always answers the call to duty with unsurpassed excellence."

The 123rd Airlift Wing won the award for exceptional service from July 1, 2014 to June 30, 2015. During that time, the unit mobilized more than 250 Airmen for wartime and humanitarian deployments to the U.S. Central Command and U.S. Africa Command areas of responsibility, supporting Operations Enduring Freedom, Freedom's Sentinel and United Assistance.

In Southwest Asia, the wing's 123rd Operations Group flew 403 combat and 625 combat-support sorties, airlifting 4,000 troops, more than 3,500 tons cargo and hundreds of wounded service members. In Africa, the wing's 123rd Contingency Response Group established an airlift hub to process and forward troops, cargo and medical supplies into Liberia as part of Operation United Assistance, the multi-agency effort to stop the largest Ebola outbreak in history.

Additionally, Airmen from the wing's 123rd Special Tactics Squadron were deployed for more than 2,000 days, supporting 270 combat missions and 50 Combat Search and Rescue sorties in U.S. Central Command.

Curry retires, ending career of 30 years

After more than 30 years of service to the Air National Guard, Chaplain (Col.) Thomas Curry was officially retired in a ceremony here June 7.

Brig. Gen. Steven P. Bullard, chief of staff for Headquarters, Kentucky Air National Guard, praised Curry for his dedication to the unit, addressing an audience that included current and retired members of the Kentucky Air Guard as well as many members of Parkland Baptist Church in Louisville, where Curry has been a civilian pastor since 1984.

CE hones skills at California base

More than 50 Members of the Kentucky Air National Guard's 123rd Civil Engineer Squadron concluded a week-long training exercise here June 13 that was designed to enhance their job skills and command-and-control capabilities.

According to Lt. Col Rodney O. Boyd, deployment commander for the unit, the exercise provided CE Airmen with hands-on training in a natural, realistic environment.

Family Day draws hundreds

By Tech. Sgt. Vicky Spesard
123rd Airlift Wing Public Affairs

Classic cars shining in the sun, braying farm animals in a pen and bounce houses filled with laughing children all lined the end of the runway next to a C-130 during annual Family Day activities here Sept. 13.

In partnership with the Airman and Family Readiness Office and the Key Volunteer Group, hundreds of family members and guests of Kentucky Air Guardsmen gathered for the day's events, which began with a welcome address from Col. Barry Gorter, wing commander of the 123rd Airlift Wing.

"It's not that often that we get the opportunity to say thank you to our families who, are always there as our support structure," said Gorter, who addressed the crowd inside the Fuel Cell Hangar. "Today's events are a gesture of appreciation to the families, our one chance to say thank you for your support of our Kentucky Air National Guard members."

Activities for Family Day included a classic car show, jousting events, a C-130 Hercules static display, bounce houses, games and crafts.

"Today was a great day for the family and kids," said Staff Sgt. Aaron Kiger, who brought his wife and two young children. "The weather is beautiful, the kids are having fun making crafts. Family Day is always something they want to come out and do every year."
